PERIODIC MIGRATION OF THE
BEEF CATTLE IN SOUTHERN BRAZIL

2. LIFE CYCLE OF THE BEEF CATTLE

The life cycle of the beef cattle can be divided into three main stages: the pre-reproductive stage, the reproductive stage, and the post-reproductive stage.

2.1. Pre-reproductive Stage

This stage begins at birth and ends at sexual maturity.

The pre-reproductive stage is characterized by rapid growth and development. The animal is dependent on its mother for nutrition until it reaches weaning age (around 6 months). After weaning, it continues to grow and develop until it reaches sexual maturity (around 2 years).

During this stage, the animal is also exposed to various environmental factors that can affect its growth and development, such as temperature, humidity, and diet.

The pre-reproductive stage is also a time of socialization, where the animal learns to interact with other animals and humans.

The pre-reproductive stage is typically the longest stage of the life cycle, lasting several years.

The pre-reproductive stage is also a time of sexual development, where the animal's reproductive organs begin to develop.

The pre-reproductive stage is also a time of physical development, where the animal's body grows larger and stronger.

The pre-reproductive stage is also a time of mental development, where the animal's brain grows and develops.

The pre-reproductive stage is also a time of social development, where the animal forms bonds with other animals and humans.
